As the name of this software suggests, Video To Mobile Converter allows you to encode video clips to formats supported by mobile devices, such as FLV, MP4 and MP4. It can be used by individuals of any experience level. The interface of the program is clean and intuitive. Video clips can be imported into the list by using the file browser only, since the "drag and drop" method is not supported. Batch processing is allowed. In the queue you can check out the source path, start and end time, duration, output name and progress of each video. So, all you have to do is specify the output directory and profile, in order to proceed with the conversion job. Furthermore, you can configure audio and video settings when it comes to size, quality and codec, as well as preview clips in a small, built-in media player. On top of that, you can merge all videos and enable Video To Mobile Converter to automatically turn off the computer after encoding, as well as remove an item from the list or arrange items in the queue. The video conversion program runs on a moderate-to-high amount of system resources, has a good response time, quickly finishes a task and didn't freeze, crash or pop up errors during our tests. The image and sound quality is preserved at a good level (although it could had been better). Plus, you can check out an online help file. We recommend Video To Mobile Converter with some reservations. Q: c++ portable way to close file and read the next line I'd like to use a portable way to close a file and read the next line that is in the file. What is the best way to do this? I also would like to detect if there are no more lines in the file before quitting. For example this will not work: `string line; ifstream ifile("test.csv"); if (ifile) { while (getline(ifile,line)) { // do stuff with line } ifile.close(); }` Does using: `ifstream ifile("test.csv");` And saving the last line's contents before closing the file work? I can do it all in one line of code, but it will be a little messy. A: See the
