Funny, thought-provoking competition game. How well does your team do at keeping your colleagues and clients entertained while you are trying to build their business? No need to be a “yes man.” It's time to turn your biggest challenge into your biggest incentive - to develop relationships with colleagues, that lead to friendships, then influence, and eventually employ. A game like none other. — Set your team up at a board meeting, give them their assignments and watch them go to work. Teammates, clients, and even you have a vested interest in how well this works out. At the end of the game, you choose who will join your team and who will be cut loose. Then you can talk to your team about how well they did and whether they're worth bringing back next time. — What is “Among Us”? With “Among Us,” players are ranked against each other to find out who is really the best! To win the game, you need to work to gain the confidence of your peers and clients, promoting them to positions of influence to help build relationships that lead to employment. As you try to climb the ladder, friends may start to distance themselves from you, as those who you've gained their confidence realize that they may not be that valuable to you in the long run. So, you have to find out who your real friends are and cut them loose. You will probably find that your peers are very loyal to you, but they will also sometimes create distractions when it comes to you and your true goals. — Two to four people can play at once, simultaneously, working together as a team, with or against each other, and against the computer. There are multiple ways to play and different rules for dealing with the various challenges. “Among Us” is designed to foster conversation and give you lots of replay value. “Among Us” is a fun, thoughtful way to get your business colleagues to network. If you work in an office, if you are a social worker, a lawyer, an engineer, a psychiatrist, a teacher, an investment banker, a web developer, or the like, you will most likely love this game. Fuller reviews(a bad game at all, even if it's a bit short, enjoyable and almost entirely a tutorial. But do it again, with much more games that follow the same same principle.5/5 Good GamePlaying Gameshowpy doesn't advertise itself as being a review site, but it's just a great site that showcases different types of games, ranging from simple puzzle games to complex strategy ones. And it only updates once a week so it's never overwhelming.5/5 Video Game the other dayMoeon the Dark is a point and click adventure game with a difficulty of zero. It is light-hearted and amusing, I enjoyed it!The game is set in an alternate universe with a dystopian future, the world has been engulfed by a Black Void. Despite the risk of death, you need to search for a possible source of light and a way out of the abyss. At the end of the game you have to stop the base of the Black Void using your Light Key.5/5 Amazing GameMonstersAt Work: Deluxe is a 4 player party game that is an easier, more accessible version of the very popular board game, Candy Land. Take turns rolling the dice to move around the board. At the end of the game a player is chosen to answer a question. They will then play a special action that is usually, but not always, based on a monster in the game.MonstersAt Work: Deluxe combines the hilarity of the classic board game with the thrills of a party game. With 4 players, the game gives you the chance to explore a whimsical world full of thrilling and surprising monsters. Players can work together or compete to answer all the questions! The game features: - 4 players with unique, puzzle-like action cards - 5 different board sections - 45 different action cards, like ask a question, catch a monster, use a card or chase a player - a game end when players answer a question (total game time - 45 minutes) - simple, easy rules - 4 different modes, daily, time trial, one-time challenges and - more - keep your eyes on the monster card table, it's there waiting for you.ReviewsGame of Dice[...]The Royal Four... (Logically)The Royal Four... is a dice rolling game based on a simplified version of the RPG game D&D4e. You play a group of adventurers in a fantasy world,

, specifically low cost, carbon neutral biomass sources, to produce fermentable sugars are actively being pursued for the production of biofuels, including transportation fuels, and other bio-chemicals. The biomass most commonly used for this purpose is from agriculture sources, and/or technically composed of non-food sources, both food and non-food sources. During the last decade, cheaper materials for the production of ethanol (including agriculture residues) and butanol (made from corn), and oils and fats (including non-food industry residues from sources, such as vegetable oil, that are considered non-food based feedstocks) have been at the centre of research. These materials are a renewable resource, with relatively low costs when compared to fossil fuels and have environmental benefits. However, the cost of the raw materials used for the production of these fuels, some of which, such as soy protein meal have been reported as being too expensive for the current consumption rates and market demands. Other non-food sources considered for material sources include: palm oil, grease, tallow, tanner wastes, biowaste oils, petroleum derived oils, oils from industrial residues and cooking oils. These are primarily considered to be energy sources, but may be further upgraded to produce other feedstocks or fuels. Methods of producing sugar, protein and fats from industrial sources are described by Fouche et al., 8(3); and Bishop, 25 Advanced Biocatalysis and Bioprocessing (2005). A recent report published by the Global R&D Agenda Partnership (GRDP), and by the Department of Energy, describes the country rankings in the global, biofuel industry as of 2011 (Energy Sector R&D: Global Trends and the National Energy R&D Curriculum, This report identifies Canada as having recently made a high level commitment to the development of large-scale projects using enzyme catalysts for the production of: bioethanol from agricultural (crop) residues, lignocellulosic biomass, and microalgae; green energy from unconcentrated bio-based gases; and bio-based chemicals. The focus on economic rather than technical considerations might lead one to believe that expensive enzymes are being prioritized. However, technical considerations, such as stability, enzyme specificity, contamination, and solubility, are often addressed through
