Superfly 1974 (01:01:00) (1974) .Paris's mayor reminds residents that his city is open for business despite increased security measures PARIS — Mayor Anne Hidalgo on Wednesday began the nine-day national state of emergency declared after the November 13 Paris attacks with a warning to residents of the French capital not to be deceived and to remain vigilant. "Just a few days have passed since the November 13 attacks," Hidalgo said. "I urge all Parisians not to be deceived by the terrorists in calling for calm and saying that the days and nights of the state of emergency are coming to an end." All week, France has been under a state of emergency, which allows the government to declare some measures that aren't normally allowed under the country's constitution. On Wednesday, some areas of the capital were renamed by the city's mayor in tribute to the victims of the militant attacks that left 130 people dead and hundreds injured. Several areas were renamed Place de la République and Rue de la Chapelle for example to "Place du Coeur," the Place d'Etoile and the Rue d'Auteuil for "Place des Buttes-Chaumont," the Rue du Cordon Bleu for "Place Des Vosges" and the Rue Duval for "Rue du Rocher." 0cc13bf012
