coronary heart disease in patients with chronic obstructive pulmonary disease and lung cancer.
There are few detailed data on the incidence of coronary heart disease (CHD) in patients with chronic obstructive pulmonary disease (COPD).
To clarify whether patients with COPD are prone to the development of CHD, the authors evaluated the incidence of CHD in patients with COPD and lung cancer. Two hundred sixty-two consecutive patients with COPD (n = 194) or lung cancer (n = 68) who underwent coronary angiography for evaluation of suspected CHD were retrospectively studied. Coronary angiograms were interpreted by experienced interventional cardiologists. The incidence of CHD was determined in patients with COPD or lung cancer, classified by their airflow limitation (FEV1 %; less than 50, 50 to 59, 60 to 79, and 80% or more) and the presence or absence of lung cancer. The patients had a mean age of 61 +/- 10 years. The incidence of CHD was similar in COPD patients (16%) and in lung cancer patients (21%). According to our classification system, COPD patients had a CHD incidence of 11%, 9%, 24%, and 35% in the patients with no airflow limitation, mild, moderate, and severe airflow limitation, respectively ($p < 0.05$), and in patients with or without lung cancer, CHD incidence was 11% and 15%, respectively ($p = 0.86$). The incidence of CHD was higher in patients with at least mild airflow limitation, regardless of the presence
