For those who might be unfamiliar with the recycling art of Da Sidewalk Colors Group, they have created some of the most realistic canvasses using objects found along city sidewalks. What distinguishes their work from other recycling artists is that these objects are not collected from dumpsters, but they are found on the streets and other overgrown sites. Those who follow Dan Regich know that he works fast. With a column and blog, Dan has worked broadly with many different artists and art forms. One of the interesting things about Dan's work is that his mediums are not only the obvious art forms, but here we see him drawing and painting with a wireless pressure sensitive tablet. The use of pressure sensitive tablets is becoming more mainstream with many artists working with it. It allows even a person with no painting training a chance to create images and many artist are embracing the tool. But Dan's art is not confined to a tablet.
