Built in 1959, it is home to the Signature Theatre Company. History Designed by architect John Mead Howells and completed in 1959, the theatre was renamed in recognition of a $225,000 donation by playwright Neil Simon to the Kennedy Center for the Performing Arts. Prior to its dedication on October 16, 1959, the building was called the Neil Simon Theatre by the name of the company that was producing Simon's play The Gingerbread Lady, which was playing to sold-out audiences during its opening month. Simon stated that his motive for naming the theatre after himself was "to remind myself where I came from." The theater was operated by the Interstate Theatres Corp. and its largest tenant was the Academy of Dramatic Arts, a summer stock company, from 1960 through the end of the season in 1965. The Neil Simon Theatre presented the first Broadway revival of the musical Finian's Rainbow starring Robert Preston on November 25, 1961. Two years later, the theatre presented the first Broadway revival of the musical play Barefoot in the Park starring Robert Goulet. In 1963, the theatre was acquired by Farris Management, the same ownership group which operated the nearby Schubert Theatre. The company renamed the theater the Neil Simon Theatre and brought in a new lease from the Kennedy Center. During its first year, the company performed the musicals Fanny and Julius Caesar starring Jessica Walter and Eddie Bracken. In addition, the company presented a series of revues starring such companies as the Original Cast of Finian's Rainbow, the Theatre Guild, the Hal Prince Revue, and many more. In 1966, after the dissolution of Farris Management, the theatre was renamed the Theatre at Lincoln Center. The company also became known as The Signature Theatre Company and leased it from the Lincoln Center itself. The theatre was later refurbished into a cinema, featuring the only Cinerama film
